

PATRICK WALLACE

Troop One's 26th Eagle Scout August 2005

What you are doing now?

I am currently in my senior year at New Mexico State University. I am majoring in Kinesiology with an emphasis in Exercise Science. I am part of Kappa Sigma Fraternity where I serve as Academic Committee Chair and Pledge Educator. I am currently working for student government as Associate Justice, where we are in the process of rewriting the Academic Misconduct Policy for New Mexico State University. I am also working at a physical therapy clinic in the mornings assisting with opening activities, exercise assessments, and exercise regimens. I plan to graduate in May of 2013 then go on to medical school where I hope to specialize in trauma surgery or orthopedic surgery.

Are you married?

Not married.

Kids (names and ages)

None.

Favorite Troop One Memory

In summer camp a while back, some of us wanted to go to the pool. Of course, as soon as we get there Mr. Meyer suggests to Thomas Goddard that it would be fun to get kicked out of the pool. So, of course, right away Mr. Meyer starts shooting a water gun at the lifeguards. Mr. Meyer starts encouraging us and, in no time at all, we all get kicked out of the pool. We laughed the whole way back to our camp.

Words of Wisdom (to new/existing scouts, up and coming Eagles), how Eagle has helped you in life, etc.

"You catch more bees with honey than you do vinegar." Yes, it's probably the corniest thing you have ever heard, but stop and think about what it means. If you are trying to persuade someone to give you something, whether it be a grade or money, you're much more likely to get it by being nice and respectful. No one ever got what they wanted by being mean or rude all the time.
